Hi There,

Sorry for the wait, things have picked up lately which is great.

To follow up in your request, Izzy showed up at my doorstep, waiting to get involved with our volunteer program. I tried to make conversation and asked what she does for a living, where she's from etc. Turned out she was very interested in Anti-Rhino poaching units and wanted to join the efforts.

I told her that there's generally a lot of training that is required before getting involved and she mentioned Ronin, explaining to me that she has done the course and training (bare in mind I'm not familiar with how things are done there).

So this sounded promising and told her to set up a meeting with the Head at the time, and that she should get all her paperwork together, and that's when she said she has none, she's been hard done and struggling to get hold of the paperwork for her training. Definitely negative and playing Damsel in distress and ended up messing the volunteer program around as well.

I hope this helps

However, you are able to complete the practical aspects of the upcoming Operations Week and we strongly encourage you to do so in your own interests.

The reason that it is in your interest to partake fully and attain a good practical mark for Operations Week, is that this practical mark will be combined with your summative assessment (Badge Test) mark on your return and, if sufficient, will prevent you having to redo the entire Operations Week saving you time and money.

Please note you will only be charged 1/5 of the full course fee for each module that you need to retake.
